1. Kecskenet. In October 1952 there was an armored division command in the Turista Hotel on the Bugac Puszta. The buildings of the state stock research station in Bugacmonostor were taken over for its staff. In Kecskenet itself many private dwellings have been taken over for Russian officers, including those of high Communist functionaries, who are required to make at least one room available for staff officers. Russian communications troops have laid wires between the public buildings, which are used by the Russians, and these private quarters. In the building at Boldogasszony Platz 3 there are two Russian lieutenant colonels and a major; in that at Beresenyi Gasse 4, one lieutenant colonel; in that at Kisfaludi Gasse 42, two majors and a captain; in that at Batthyany Gasse 2, a major and three other officers; In the former Rudolf Barracks is the staff of a Russian armored regiment and a battalion of the regiment. The soldiers have red and black shoulder boards. There is a great deal of coming and going, especially of staff officers. The garages of the barracks hold more than 40 T-34/85 tanks and 12 to 16 heavy tanks with turrets that turn through 360 degrees and a long-barreled gun with a muzzle-brake.

[redacted] beginning with the groups The Dózsa György Barracks on Honvéd Platz has been evacuated by a Russian unit and returned to the Hungarian Army. The armored battalion that was formerly here has been moved to the village of Izzák. A Russian armored battalion and a motorcycle company are stationed in the Hussar Barracks on Izzaki Gasse. The tanks are T-34/85s; they are garaged in the former stables.

[redacted] The Otthon movie plays weekly for the Russians.
